

Afternoon Tea

FORTNUM & MASON AT THE ROYAL EXCHANGE

A daily obsession at Fortnum's for centuries, our newly reimagined Royal Exchange Afternoon Tea brings exceptional patisserie, just-baked scones, elegant sandwiches and glorious tea to our white-clothed tables here in the heart of the City.

And don't forget your finishing slice of cake...

THE PUDDING SONG

(to be sung to the tune of Hark! The Herald Angels Sing)

*Bring the pudding to the table,
Give her pride of time and place.
Light the pudding when you're able,
Mind the flames around your face!
Joyful all the spoonfuls shared,
Of this sweet thing so prepared.
With plump fruits and spirits high,
Save no room for mincemeat pies!
When the mighty pud is done,
Shall we make another one?*

Vegetarian Afternoon Tea

Before the short, stout, handle-and-spouted teapot of today, there was just a bowl; a simple clay Chinese vessel that was made to hold and infuse tea leaves in hot water, before it was poured through a hole or strainer. It took until the 16th century for the first actual teapot to appear, in Yixing, China: a town now famed for its teapots.
